DUTIES OF REVIEWERS

• Peer review
All submissions to the journal are initially reviewed by the Editor-in-Chief and Assistant Editors. At this stage manuscripts may be rejected without peer review if it is felt that they are not of high enough priority or not relevant to the journal. This fast rejection process means that authors are given a quick decision and do not need to wait for the review process. Manuscripts that are not instantly rejected are sent out for peer review, usually to two independent reviewers.

- Double-blind review

CPLT operates a double blind review process. Author(s) identity is removed from the manuscript and shielded from the reviewers during the review process. The reviewer is left with only the manuscript without any information that might enable him/her uncovers the identity of the author(s). Information removed includes the author(s) name, address/affiliation, and country. Any information in the Acknowledgement that may lead to the uncovering of the identity of the author is also removed from the manuscript prior to sending it to reviewers.

Manuscripts are assigned to members of the editorial board of the journal or other qualified reviewers. Reviewers make one of the following recommendations:

- Accepted and published with high priority
- Accepted with minor revisions
- Reconsidered after major revision
- Rejected

Based on the feedback from these reviewers and the Editors' judgment a decision is given on the manuscript. Manuscripts may also be sent out for statistical review.

- Letter of Appreciation

Letter of Appreciation is issued to reviewers after the review of the manuscript. The review reports are sent to the authors. However, reviewers’ identity is removed from the review reports. The author(s) is left with only the review reports/recommendation without any information that might enable him/her uncovers the identity of the reviewers.

A minimum of two review reports are required per manuscript.

Only an editor has the authority to “Accept” or “Reject” a manuscript. If a manuscript is “Accepted”, an Acceptance Acknowledgement is issued to the author(s) and the manuscripts are processed for publication.

If a manuscript is rejected, the authors are informed of the decision and no further processing is done on the manuscript.

If a manuscript requires improvement, it is sent to the author(s) with the editor’s recommendation for further revision. The editor makes a final decision on the revised to “Accept” or “Reject” the manuscript.
